TRAVIS COURT by Drexel

Into the fast-paced activity of today's American home, Drexel's Travis Court brings an air of hospitable serenity. True, it provides in generous measure the function and efficiency today's modern homes require. Yet in spirit, Travis Court returns to the gracious ways of 18th century England and America, where the byword was charm and elegance. The vintage look of fine antique furniture is beautifully apparent in Travis Court. Look for it in the unmistakable hallmarks of the master Georgian designers . . . Sheraton, Hepplewhite, Duncan Phyfe. These men have never been surpassed in the art of creating liveable furniture of timeless warmth and beauty. Small wonder their styles have endured through generations of changing fashions. In fact, Travis Court is even more popular today than it was when it was introduced over twenty-five years ago . . . a remarkable tribute to its good taste!

But it is not only superb styling that makes Travis Court so outstanding. Look at the splendour of its swirl mahogany veneers. They "tone" from dark brilliance to topaz fire . . . that amber glow so unmistakable in fine old mahogany. And protecting this old-master finish is the lustre of hand-rubbed, hand-waxed, hand-polished lacquer. And that's not all. Acting as a dramatic foil to the richness of stately mahogany are accent furniture pieces glorified with brilliant chinoiserie decorations . . . the traditional Chinese fairy tale motifs hand-painted on black lacquer backgrounds.

With hardware too, traditional 18th century elegance is carried out in the graceful oval door and drawer pulls . . . fine brasses satin-finished to a gem-like glow.

Over a quarter-century of constantly growing popularity have proved Travis Court a masterpiece. Study its elegant charm, its vintage mellowness, its uncompromising Drexel construction . . . and you will discover why!
